

This is an unnecessary service. It has been well documented in various field trials that it creates more RF interference than the service it is intended to provide/replace and, with the services already provided by cable networks, is not giving us something we don't already have.